From the Rabbi

With the exception of Shabbat, there are no Jewish holidays in the month of Cheshvan, which begins at sundown on Friday, November 1. How different Cheshvan is from Tishrei, the month that is coming to an end. Together our members celebrated Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur, Sukkot, and Simchat Torah. It was great to be at Temple Beth Shalom in Fort Walton beach all month.

I extend my deepest thanks to everyone who participated in our holidays. From those who read parts, to those who baked and cooked, to Michael Walker for his beautiful music, and to those who shared their musical talents, from Les Matheson for his incredible shofar blowing, to Chuck London for all his skills as gabbai, to KaylaMae Smith for all that she does for our congregation. Please my sincere apologies for those that I have forgotten to name.

How blessed we were to worship in a refurbished sanctuary. Susan told me how comfortable the pews were. The beauty of the new floors, painted walls, and refreshed kitchen, and so many new furnishings helped us usher in 5785 in style. Many thanks to Tisha Fleet and her committee for working so hard and continuing to work so hard to complete this undertaking.

I was delighted that we were able to gather for Selichot, and to celebrate Sukkot in our sukkah throughout the week of the holiday. I am already musing over some other ideas for Sukkot 5786, like soup in the sukkah, cigars in the sukkah, songs in the sukkah, sushi in the sukkah, and spaghetti in the sukkah. If the mitzvah of the holiday is to spend time in the sukkah we should think creatively about how to get people inside. I welcome all ideas.

Thinking about ways for us to gather, my mind is on study. I am initiating a five-week introduction to Mussar class, from 12-1, on Wednesdays in November and December. Mussar is an opportunity to focus on our inner selves, to reflect on ethical living and to become more self-aware.

Developed in the 19th Century, Mussar is an invitation for personal transformation by embracing middot, virtues that allow to grow from the inside out. We will be using the text entitled, "Everyday Holiness," written by Alan Morinis. It is readily available on Amazon. If these five weeks are a success, and there is continued interest, I would love to continue this gathering into 2025.

And one more thing I am thinking about as we enter Cheshvan, and that is the month of Kislev, the month that follows Cheshvan. Hanukkah falls in Kislev. The first night of Hanukkah is Christmas night. I am wondering if people would be interested in gathering at Temple, to light candles, and also make an event of the afternoon. Share your opinion about gathering during the day for games like UNO or Rummy or Poker, and then having latkes and soups and salads for dinner, followed by Hanukkah songs, and maybe even a dreidel competition. I would be happy to coordinate the event if I knew there was interest. Our daughter Shira will be with us from Pittsburgh, and we would very much like to spend the first night of the holiday with others.

I am also wondering if we might have a movie night at the Temple, on Saturday December 21. The latest Hallmark Hanukkah movie, Hanukkah on the Rocks, premieres on December 13, but I thought it might be fun for us to watch it together. I am told we have a large screen to show movies on. We could have some popcorn and snacks. Please let me know if there is any interest, and might someone be willing to coordinate this event? Don't be shy.

I have rambled enough. I hope to see you at Temple very soon.

All my best,

Rabbi Schadlick

Lunch and Learn with Rabbi Schadick

Join the Rabbi for an introduction to the practice of Mussar.

Mussar is a way to develop greater holiness by growing our inner virtues, called middot. Mussar provides a springboard for focused self-reflection through study and action.

The text being used is entitled, "Everyday Holiness: The Jewish Spiritual Path of Mussar" by Alan Morinis.

Military Moment

October was a busy month with Rosh Hashana, Yom Kippur, Sukkot, and Shim Torah. Because of all this activity, I was unable to make it out to any of the bases to meet with the chaplains or Jewish military personnel. I did make it a point to send out email messages to everyone. KaylaMae also sent out messages giving the chaplains a full schedule of all out High Holiday Events. They distributed the schedule to their Jewish military members.

November will be a different story. I intend to visit each base and set up a meet and greet for gathering information on what our military members need for Hanukkah. I will reach out to a couple of organizations that support our military and see what they can do.

Also, November 10th is the Marine Corps Birthday. For the November 8th service, I plan to bring a cake and honor all active-duty military, their families, and our veterans of all services. Please come, celebrate, and honor our men and women who serve and served our country.

Themes of Cheshvan

Spiritual Energy of the Month: Integration

Cheshvan is a time to exhale. It is a time to let go of the energetic build-up of Elul... to release after the spiritual work on Tishrei.

Cheshvan is also called Mar-Cheshvan. Mar can have different meanings, but some write that Cheshvan is given the title mar (“bitter”) because it is the only month in the Hebrew calendar that does not contain any holidays.

I personally find such sweetness in the absence of celebration... in the quiet moments that offer space for reflection and internalization. I remember the first time I planted garlic. [My teacher] taught us that we plant in the fall - that garlic prefers to spend the winter months dormant beneath the ground. Garlic is a plant that honours the need to go inward; that celebrates cycles of dormancy to balance phases of growth and abundance.

In the same ways, Cheshvan celebrates stillness and quiet. It is a month to be small. A month to be silent. A month to internalize, to integrate, to centre. Cheshvan is a time to exhale. It is a necessary balancing to the fullness of the breath.

Thank you to all our members and visitors who brought non perishable food and toiletries for Sharing & Caring for our Annual High Holiday Food Drive!

We Love Our Children

We love having children attend services, regardless of their age. We know kids fidget and sometimes need to take a break from services. That's why we have that special room for them in the back of the sanctuary. For mothers who need to breast feed their babies, we have set up a rocking chair in the library to give you a bit more privacy. Also, we now have a great religious school program for children, as well as one for adults.

Also, some of you know that I volunteer with the Okaloosa Sheriff's Office Community Policing Program. Through this program, I was introduced to the Early Learning Coalition of the Emerald Coast, which is a free program for pre-school children. Please contact me directly and I will get you information about the program. They even gave me several free books for parents with small children. See me for a book.

Remember, even if we don't have kids, we do love children.

Daddy's a Thief

By Mark Zeid

One day at a food court a family consisting of the father, the mother, and a four-year boy stopped in. This is the kind of place where they have burgers, sub sandwiches, pizza, coffee and sweets, etc. The family goes up the burger place and they each get a set meal of a hamburger, fries, and a soft drink. The mother grabs some napkins and goes to find a table for the family to sit. Meanwhile, the father and the little boy get the food and the cups of their drinks. They go to the drink station and fill their cups up with soft drink of their choice. The father also picks up some sugar and creamer for his coffee the next morning.

The little boy looks at his father and says, "Daddy, you can't take that. That's stealing."

The father responds, "No, it's not. This stuff is free. You're allowed to take whatever and as much as you want."

"No, Daddy," the little boy says, "You got a Coke. You didn't get coffee. You can't take that because you don't have coffee. That's stealing."

The father and the little boy leave the drink station and join the mother. "Daddy's a thief" the boy exclaims. "He stole sugar and creamer for coffee, but he didn't get coffee."

The father sighs and looks to the mother. "Honey, will you explain to our son that I didn't steal anything. That's it's okay to take this stuff, even if you didn't get coffee."

The mother looks at the little boy. "That's right. Your father is a thief. Now, be quiet and eat your French fries."

New Book Release

Meet the unorthodox crime fighting crew of Comfort Cottages Assisted Living Facility. Franklin suffers from dementia and uses a cane, Dot uses a wheelchair and loves puzzles, Joseph and Brenda are proof there is love after the age of eighty, and Melissa provides the logic to lead the group. Meanwhile, Jennifer, the manager of Comfort Cottages works to keep everyone safe and out of trouble, which is no easy task when they take on the case of finding the killer of a young woman. To make matters worse, the killer hires two others to stop the aged sleuths, including Franklin who witnessed the murder. Then a mysterious notebook turns up and brings the group into more danger. The question is can these aged mystery sleuths best the killers and bring them to justice or will they end up as the killers' next victims?
